A Few words of commendation of Wm. Jennings Bryan are now and then forced by circumstance from the New York World and Post-Dispatch; but the deliverance seems painful.

THE war news is accommodating to the feelings of all partisans. From Berlin we learn that the German army is achieving successes day after day and that the Austrians are playing havoc with the Russians. Paris and London dispatches tell us that the allies are steadily advancing against their enemies, and that disaster after disaster is demoralizing the German legions, while the Russians are over-running Austria. And there you are! There is gratification to you, be you pro-German or anti. Meantime, the hell of war goes on blistering assinine humanity.

THE voice of the calamity howler is upraised these days, but it no longer possesses the influence it once did exert. On the contrary, it but gives point to the fact that he has no good grounds for complaint against the Democratic powers that be. All their promises have been made good; patient wisdom has blessed our country with peace; justice and forbearance toward our weaker neighbors have established with them relationship that promises well for the future in good-will as well as in commerce. Let the howler, so handicapped, howl his loudest. Poor fellow! 'Tis the best he can do.

SAYS the Jackson Cash-Book: "We regret that we found it necessary this week to turn down quite a tempting advertising proposition. Through the medium of an advertising agency, the railroad interests of the country are buying space in country weeklies in which to influence public sentiment in their behalf. The large corporations of the country have for years controlled in this manner the large daily papers. Thus far the railroads have not thought it necessary to reach out after the country press. The series of articles they ask The Cash-Book to publish truly describes the condition of the railroads as very distressing, owing to the influence of the war and other causes on their business; but we do not believe the country papers should sell themselves to any of the corporations." Now, to my notion, the selling of space in a newspaper does not involve the editorial conduct of such paper. In the instance here referred to the matter printed is plainly marked "advertisement," so that no reader can be misled into thinking that it is editorial expression, or that it necessarily voices the sentiment of the editor. Some years ago, when the REGISTER was the only paper in Iron County, I published, week after week, the Republican county ticket—at so much per, of course. It never entered my mind that it affected my loyalty to the Democratic party, and I never heard it criticized on that account. Neither does the publication of these railroad articles hamper me in editorial expression: I feel as free to my "yes" or "nay" as though I had never heard of them, and therefore trust that in acknowledging to a belief that there is good ground for the contention made therein by the great transportation corporations it will not be laid to having received "so much in hand the whilst."

The American Policy.

The peaceful settlement of the Dominican revolution is another demonstration of the prudent and helpful policy of the President in American foreign affairs.

President Wilson did not invent this American foreign policy. President Roosevelt put it in operation over the finances of Santo Domingo and President Taft over the political government of Nicaragua. But Mr. Wilson demonstrated it upon a conspicuous scale in Mexico in the face of strong opposition abroad and criticism at home, and proclaimed it to the world in a public address as historic as Canning's first definition of the Monroe Doctrine.

It has won acceptance abroad and approval at home, and will probably govern the American policies of the United States hereafter.—The Minneapolis Journal.

A Man of Peace.

At a time like the present when the nations of Europe are rushing at each other's throats, and humanity stands aghast at the thought of the horrors of the impending conflict, when the spirit of militarism pervades the Old World, and the powers are determined upon slaughter, it is fortunate for the United States that there is at the head of the National Government a man of peace with strength of character and force of intellect. Happily, no imitation warlord sits in the White House. The course which this country must follow is straight and definite. It must maintain strict neutrality, and avoid the slightest appearance of favor toward one of the belligerents against another. It is the friend of each and all of them and must so remain.—The Waterville (Me.) Sentinel.
